INTRODUCTION

Introduction Military patriotism refers to the feeling of love and devotion that people have for their military and the nation. It is the sense of duty and dedication to serve one's nation and protect it at all costs. Military patriotism plays a crucial role in building a strong nation and maintaining its security, sovereignty, and independence. It instills a sense of responsibility and commitment among citizens, including young people. Therefore, training the young generation in military patriotism is vital to the life of society as it helps shape the nation's future, promotes social unity, and fosters a national identity.

MAIN BODY

Why Training the Young Generation in Military Patriotism is Crucial

1. Building a Strong Foundation for National Defense Military patriotism is essential to national defense as it instills a sense of responsibility and commitment to safeguard the nation's security and sovereignty. Without military patriotism, young people may not understand the importance of defending their nation and the sacrifices that it takes to do so. Military training teaches young people about the history of their nation and the role of the military in defending it. Young people learn about the principles of warfare and the importance of patriotism, loyalty, and courage. This training helps to instill a sense of duty and responsibility in young people to serve their country, which is critical for national defense. Promoting Social Unity Military training is an excellent avenue for promoting social unity among young people from different backgrounds. The military is a great equalizer that brings together people from different races, cultures, and religions. Training in the military builds camaraderie, teamwork, and mutual respect among young people. It also helps to break down stereotypes and prejudices that may exist in society. Through military training, young people learn to work together to achieve a common goal, which fosters social unity. Fostering a National Identity Military patriotism helps to foster a national identity and a sense of belonging among young people. When young people develop a strong attachment to their country and its symbols, they are more likely to feel a sense of pride and loyalty towards their nation. Military training builds this attachment by teaching young people about the symbols of their nation, such as the flag, anthem, and coat of arms. This training also teaches young people about the values and principles that their nation stands for, such as freedom, democracy, and human rights. By fostering a national identity, military patriotism helps to promote a sense of unity and solidarity among citizens. Developing Leadership and Life Skills Military training provides young people with opportunities to develop leadership and life skills that are useful in other areas of their lives. For instance, young people learn how to manage their time, prioritize tasks, and work with others to achieve a common goal. These skills are valuable in the workplace, sports, and other areas of life. Military training also teaches young people about self-discipline, resilience, and perseverance, which are essential for success in life. Enhancing Personal Growth and Development Military training provides young people with opportunities for personal growth and development. Through this training, young people learn to overcome challenges and develop a strong sense of self-belief and self-worth. They also learn about their strengths and weaknesses, which helps them to develop a sense of self-awareness. Military training provides young people with the skills they need to be successful in life, such as critical thinking, problem-solving, and decision-making. Military patriotism is a crucial aspect of shaping the attitudes, behaviors, and values of young people towards their country's armed forces. The role of military patriotism in society is to instill a sense of responsibility and duty towards one's nation, teaching young people to value their country's freedom, democracy, and sovereignty. It also fosters a sense of unity and camaraderie among young people by working together towards a common goal of protecting their nation. Military patriotism promotes essential life skills such as leadership, discipline, and resilience. The military has a strict code of conduct that emphasizes discipline, punctuality, and respect for authority. These values can be instilled in young people through military-style training programs such as cadet programs or boot camps. By learning these values, young people can develop the necessary skills to succeed in various areas of life. Moreover, military patriotism can help young people develop a sense of pride and identity in their country. By learning about their nation's history, culture, and traditions, young people can develop a deep sense of connection to their nation. This sense of pride and identity can help young people navigate the challenges of modern life and provide them with a sense of purpose and direction. The importance of military patriotism lies in its ability to promote responsibility, unity, and camaraderie among young people. Without this sense of responsibility, young people may not understand the importance of national security and the sacrifices made by the armed forces to protect their country. Military patriotism is also essential for promoting social cohesion, which is becoming increasingly important in today's world. Furthermore, military patriotism promotes essential life skills such as leadership, discipline, and resilience. These skills are crucial for succeeding in various areas of life, including education, career, and personal relationships. By instilling these skills in young people, military patriotism can help them become responsible citizens who contribute positively to their society. Finally, military patriotism helps young people develop a sense of pride and identity in their country. This sense of pride and identity can help young people navigate the challenges of modern life and provide them with a sense of purpose and direction. It also helps them develop a deep connection to their nation, which is essential for maintaining national unity and promoting social harmony.

The Republican psychologists' research on spirituality analyzes national values and its methods and tools for the development of military students. Educating military students is one of the main tasks of military school teachers. With the help of upbringing, the tried, best, progressive experience of generations is assimilated and passed on to the new generation, people's consciousness and moral values are inculcated in this society, and a conscious attitude towards them is formed. Therefore, one of the important tasks of the education system is to form and develop the values of faith and patriotism in the worldview of adolescent students, to turn them into sustainable beliefs. It is important to have a deeper understanding of the essence of independence, to love and be proud of the Motherland, to inculcate in the educational process what military students should pay attention to in order to protect the honour of the Motherland. Understanding is the beginning of all human qualities, the achievement of a solid unity of knowledge, skills and abilities about the historical memory, socio-spiritual life, national heritage, customs and traditions, values, psyche of our people, their conscious assessment, achieving positive spiritual values, conscious self-management, living with the values of the Motherland, contributing to its development; it is a combination of qualities such as respect for one's mother tongue and respect for other nations. It allows teenagers to learn about national identity, the past of the nation, the uniqueness of its history. Because a person who does not understand the history of his people cannot determine his place in society and his position among different nations. A person who does not have a social status cannot think independently and make decisions in different situations. Therefore, he is doomed to dependence, servitude and slavery. In the process of forming patriotic values in adolescent military students, it instills in them a sense of confidence in the future, making forward-looking plans and aspirations. Confidence in the future nurtures in a person mental endurance, the formation and manifestation of willpower, motivates him to try to get out of the situation on the basis of logical thinking, even in complex, very difficult situations. In the formation of patriotic values, national customs, traditions and values, the ideas put forward in them, serve to form the human psyche, in which to cultivate spiritual and moral qualities. One of the defining factors of nationality is customs, traditions and values. Therefore, as a representative of the nation, the preservation and enrichment of national traditions, customs and values is becoming a social and psychological necessity. In turn, pride in the fact that the ideas of national customs, traditions and values serve the development of the nation, the development of humanity, ensures that adolescent military students acquire the values of faith and patriotism. In the organization of educational work, it is desirable to pay attention to the training of military students in the skills of preserving national traditions, customs and values, the ability to strive to enrich them. It is advisable to pay special attention to introducing military students to the heroes of our time, who are effective in the field of production and creativity, and to be active in this direction. It is necessary to create psychological and pedagogical conditions for adolescents not to put personal interests above the interests of society, to fully understand their human duties to society and the nation, to strive to work for the happiness of the people and the welfare of the country. It is necessary to revive the tradition of organizing large-scale and high-level interesting events promoting patriotic ideas among students studying in the military.

CONCLUSION

Training the young generation in military patriotism is crucial to the life of society as it helps shape the nation's future, promotes social unity, and fosters a national identity. Military patriotism is essential to national defense as it instills a sense of responsibility and commitment to safeguard the nation's security and sovereignty. Military training promotes social unity by bringing together young people from different backgrounds and fostering teamwork and mutual respect.
